Why Does the Tulsa Bus Line Company Use REO Speed Wagons Exclusively?

Because—

Bus No. 102, which was put in operation December 29, 1919, has been driven 112,780 miles. Bus No. 103, put in operation January 10, 1920, has been driven 110,000 miles. Bus No. 104, put in operation March 5, 1920, has been driven 92,640 miles. Bus No. 105, put in operation July 10, 1920, has been driven 81,320 miles, and because, after this hard and trying service, they are making their allotted mileage every day on schedule time.

Because—

They are able to obtain an average of 10 miles per gallon of gasoline, notwithstanding the unusual number of stops; an average of 500 miles per quart of lubricating oil and an average of 12,000 miles per set of cord tires. And because the cost of REO replacement parts is so low, when compared to the cost of parts for other trucks, that the average monthly maintenance charge is negligible.

Because—

No matter what accident may happen to one of these trucks, it is always possible to get it "back on the line" within a few hours. Almost every part of the complete truck is carried in our large parts department and that department is in charge of men who realize value of time to car owners. Therefore, there is little delay, if any, due to breakdown in the operation of Reo cars or Speed Wagons.

Because—

The remarkable flexibility of the REO motor, together with the sturdy construction of the REO chassis, makes possible the five-minute schedule maintained during rush hours over the three-mile route. The perfect ease of operation and control is a means of almost entirely eliminating accidents. In fact, the Tulsa Bus Line has never had any serious accidents—due in part to careful drivers—but REO brakes are positive.

Because—

REO frame construction is ideal for the mounting of specially designed bodies. These bodies, which we furnish, are constructed with the idea of making ease, comfort and SAFETY of passengers the primary specification. Much thought is given to heating, ventilation and sanitation in our special bodies. The construction of windshield and placing of driver's seat insure the clear and unobstructed view which is so necessary in heavy traffic.

Because—

They know that REO is the "Gold Standard of Values" and that SERVICE is the watchword of the REO organization—from the highest salaried factory executive to the youngest mechanic's helper in the smallest REO agency in the nation. And every REO owner has this powerful and far-reaching organization at his command.

THEREFORE, THEY STANDARDIZE ON REOS—WHY DON'T YOU?

We will be glad to show you the REO SPEED WAGON with any of the various standard bodies or, if your needs are unusual, we are in a position to make you prices on bus or other special bodies that are unusually low when the high standard of workmanship and material are considered.
